Series Title: The Rating Game (Book One)
Subtitle (Optional): The Illusion of Perfection Series Class: AI-Adjacent
Authors: Em Green and Sean O’Leary
Publisher: Margins Abound LLC
Publication Year: 2025
Word Count: Approx. 67,000 words
Language: English
Format: PDF

https://books2read.com/ratinggamebooks1

All concepts, tone, character arcs, and narrative structure were developed by the human authors.

This distinction is made in the interest of transparency, ethics, and documentation of creative method.

- This novel takes place in a fictional urban publishing industry landscape.
- All companies, venues, systems, and technologies are entirely fictional, invented solely for the purpose of this narrative.
- Any resemblance to actual persons, organizations, systems, or locations is purely coincidental and unintentional.

• This world was constructed to echo the emotional, economic, and creative tensions of real-life authors navigating modern systems.

This work is part of the AI-Adjacent collection, a human-originated series supported by the tools of artificial intelligence.

• Five-star review culture
• Publishing metrics and validation
• Industry manipulation vs. authentic voice
• Creative sabotage
• AI in authorship
• Literary identity under pressure
• The danger of performance-based success

LCC:
PS3600.R46 I45 2025
Dewey Decimal: 813/.6

BISAC Codes:
• FIC019000 (Fiction / Literary)
• FIC043000 (Fiction / Satire)
• FIC000000 (Fiction / General)

book rating manipulation, publishing satire, five-star review culture, AI publishing influence, author resilience, creative sabotage, algorithmic suppression, indie authors fighting back, psychological publishing drama, who controls book success, fiction about writing and rating, AI and author conflict, contemporary literary fiction with industry twist, story about storytelling, quiet revolution in publishing, metafiction author story

Universal Book Link: https://books2read.com/ratinggamebooks1